

NEWSFLASH!

STRIKE ACTION ANTICIPATED AT BRITISH AIRWAYS

Travel Resources received news today that an upcoming British Airways strike is due on March 20, 21, 22 and then again on March 27, 28, 29 and 30. We will be contacting our clients who may be affected by this action to provide them with assistance in securing alternate flight arrangements.

British Airways is currently operating normally and they intend to publish a flying schedule approximately five days in advance of the first strike date. British Airways has temporarily stopped selling seats on all flights operating on the strike dates.

In the event of a strike:

- Flights from London City (LCY) to and from New York (JFK) will operate as normal and any changes to bookings on these flights are subject to the original fare rules.
- All long haul flights to and from London Gatwick will continue to operate normally and any changes to bookings on these flights are subject to the original fare rules.
- For all other flights (LHR and short-haul LGW), until British Airways finalizes their flying schedule, passengers booked to travel March 19 –31, 2010, have the choice of rebooking or cancelling and obtaining a refund.

Please note that policies are all subject to change
For British Airways' latest policies and updates, please visit batraveltrade.com/strike.

Should you have any questions or concerns, do not hesitate to contact Selina Johnston directly at:

Selina Johnston
905-480-9986
selinaj@travelresources.net

Don't want to receive the Travel Resources NewsFlash?
Click here, and type UNSUBSCRIBE